Once upon a time, there lived a man who was a servant at the king's palace. He had two jerrycans which he used to fetch water for the king. He would hang the cans on each side of a pole and hang them on his shoulders.

He did this for one year but one day the leaking jerrycan spoke to him and complained and told him sorry for not being able to deliver enough water. The man felt sorry for the can and told it as they returned to the palace that it should look on its side and see how many beautiful flowers were there.

The can noticed nice flowers which the servant had planted and were being watered by its leaking water everytime.

The servant told the can that he knew his problem and that was why he planted the flowers to make something good out of the jerrycan's problem. He picked some flowers everyday to beautify the king's table. The can was happy and never complained again.

Read the passage below and answer questions 41 to 50

Most people go shopping in the big supermarkets usually called malls. There are many shopping malls in Nairobi. They are fully stocked and one can hardly miss anything. Other than the usual things stocked in supermarkets, like flour, salt, rice, soap etc, malls sell green vegetables and fruits. Some have butcheries and chemists' from where medicine is dispensed.

Shoppers do not just get inside the malls. By the entrance are guards who beef up security by checking all customers before they enter. They then leave any luggage outside at the left luggage area. Once a customer deposits their luggage they are issued with a tag on it. This allows the customers to identify their belongings.

Depending on what one is buying, they push a trolley to load items or carry a shopping basket. Items are arranged in the shelves from where shoppers pick their choices. After shopping, they queue at the cashier's table for payment. This is followed by a payment and the cashier issues a receipt.

Customer's goods are packed by the mall attendants in branded paper bags. The customer then leaves through the exit and picks up their luggage if they had deposited any. This must be after the customer produces the tag given earlier.
